Racketeering, lawyers, doctors and insurance "adjusters"—known under the generic term "ambulance chasers"—come in for a showing-up in "Born To Be Bad" showing Sunday and Monday, August 19 and 20, at the Torrance Theatre. In this 20th Century Picture, produced by Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck as a co-starring vehicle for Loretta Young and Cary Grant, the cinema-going public will see how "ambulance chasers" engineer a heavy damage suit against a wealthy man following a trivial accident. The story, propelled rapidly forward through a series of mirthful scenes that often skirt the edge of pathos, moves to a heart-breaking climax which offers the unscrupulous mother an opportunity to redeem much of her past. Also shown on this bill, "Jane Eyre," with Colin Clive and Virginia Bruce.

HE PLAYS AS HARD AS HE WORKS—Will Rogers learning golf with uproarious results in "Handy Andy" 2PB

One and Only Will Rogers At The Plaza 4 Nights Starting Aug. 22

HIS WIFE WANTS HIM TO PLAY, AND HE DOES!—Will Rogers as he appears in "Handy Andy" with Conchita Montenegro

The chances are that Will Rogers saw right through the gag from the very beginning. But this is the way it works: It's 9:05 in the morning. Rogers wants to finish his part of the day's work right away and depart for Santa Monica to play polo all afternoon. But there's a slight difference of opinion between star and director regarding whether the former should wear a golf outfit consisting of checked plus fours, brown and white golf shoes, a v-neck and white golf socks, or a suit.

"Okay, Bill," Butler says. "We'll send back to town and get the plain suit you want to wear. Of course, that means we'll be here all day. If we could start right now, with the outfit you've got on, we could finish by noon at the latest and I could go back to the studio for scenes you're not in." Folio wins. So the golf outfit is what Rogers wears in that hilarious golf sequence in "Handy Andy," which will be shown August 22, 23, 24 and 25 at the Plaza Theatre in Hawthorne. Charlie Ruggles Has Leading Role In Comedy Drama

Ruggles is famed for his life-like portrayals of shy and retiring little men. His acting skill brings to life the type of chap everyone knows, perhaps the man next door, or the clerk in the office who cringes whenever the boss approaches. Eugene Pallette, Dorothy Burgess, Dorothy Tree, Berton Churchill, Robert Barrat and Harry Beresford have other leading roles in the picture, which was directed by Edward Ludwig from the screen play by Warren Duff and Sidney Sutherland. On the same bill, Leslie Howard in "Of Human Bondage."
